For the C24 Gallery director and curator David C. Terry, the choice of presentation reflects an appetite for discovery among fairgoers. "The collector base is familiar with the gallery, they're familiar with the work that we bring, but they also know that we're going to bring some exciting, different work," he said.

This variety is also reflected in the price points of works at the fair. While the majority of pieces lean towards the four- to five-figure ranges, six-figure works are not a total rarity.
